It's the High Cost of Dying in China

A Typical Chinese Monument

The Chinese bury their dead on the mountain side where the earth is dry and there is less danger of floods. The monuments are built along the highway to inform the public of the great men who have lived and died in the neighboring villages.

A brief history of the dead man serves as an epitaph, and a tortoise or dragon, carved into the stone, symbolizes eternal life.

Death is an expensive proposition for the Chinaman. Only the leaders of community life are honored by monuments along the highway. But by the time even the average citizen's funeral expenses are paid—with numerous pallbearers and feasts for the mourners—well, it's cheaper to live.

There is an average of one doctor to every 400,000 Chinese. So the Interchurch World Movement, in which America's evangelical bodies are cooperating, intends to cut down funeral expenses for China by opening a large number of new hospitals and by strengthening existing institutions.

GETTING PLENTY OF CHANCES WITH REDS

If Charley See, now with the champion Cincinnati Reds, does not make good in the big league he can never blame fortune for "not giving him a chance." Bought from the Buffalo club for $10,000, See went to the Reds at the same time Duncan, regular outfielder, came from Birmingham. Both tried for the outfield post, Duncan winning out. See started in the game as a pitcher, then switched to the outfield. Now Manager Moran of the Reds may try him in the box again.
